

CONFERENCE

NEW WORLD OF COMPARATIVE POLITICAL COMMUNICATION

DATE:

Thursday & Friday, May 5-6, 2016

LOCATION:

Room 2115, Allen Building,
Department of Political Science,
Texas A&M University

Recent advances in data availability and research methods have opened up a myriad of research possibilities. These advances now provide opportunities to make theoretical and empirical advances about political communication through studies within and across nations.

“The New World of Comparative Communication” conference brings together researchers from a broad range of research perspectives to share their latest work. Conference speakers will present their research in progress, and after the conference the papers will be revised and submitted for review as a special issue of Social Science Quarterly.

SPONSORED BY:

European Union Center, Department of Political Science;
Public Policy Research Institute, Department of Communication;
and the College of Liberal Arts, Texas A&M University

Supporting the Texas A&M University Grand Challenges “Strengthening Democracy” Initiative